

TABLE OF CONTENTS

C3 REPORTS

4 From the Director

The director of the Center for Communications and Community discusses what the center has learned about inter-group relations, the media and communications the past two years.

10 Editor's Perspective

Journalists paved the way with outreach. New models of media-community engagement are now emerging.

16 Engagement Leaders

An interview with Vernon Jarrett, a renowned journalist and a crusader for achievement in black communities nationwide.

FEATURES

23 Resolving Inter-Group Conflict: Lessons Learned

A commentary by Beonghwan Kim, a leading advocate of multicultural approaches to social justice and racial harmony.

28 Building and Managing a Multicultural Media Network

A profile of Sandy Close, founder and director of NCM, a news group that unites and serves ethnic media.

34 Promoting Understanding Between Cultures

A look at how and why NCM members are reaching out to communities beyond their race and ethnicity.

36 Race Relations in San Antonio: Breaking the Silence

A conversation about race and class with leading researchers from the Culture and Policy Institute at the University of Texas at San Antonio.

42 Covering Color: Ambivalence and the Racial/Ethnic News Beat

Richard Gonzales, a national correspondent for National Public Radio, examines policy, practice and performance as it relates to covering race and ethnicity.

45 Immigrants, Race and Power in Miami

The director of a major immigration and ethnicity institute examines inter-group tensions, racial inequities and possible solutions.

